Section 2: Reading Comprehension

A1- Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, or d:

It's unbelievable but it's a fact. There is a world paper shortage and we are running out of raw materials like timber. In fact, it's beginning to look as if the rapidly rising cost of raw materials is going to force all manufacturers to reduce the amount of packaging they use, but the public will have to accept without complaining.

This situation tells that there are no easy solutions to the problems caused by the shortage of raw materials, but we can be hopeful about some of the developments in recycling that are taking place. Several newspapers are already being printed on recycled papers and the long kept unused old paper has long been used for making cardboard boxes.

The technology involved in this is fairly simple, but some interesting new processes have been developed recently. Paper can now be eaten! It's softened and sweetened in a special machine and then fed to cows. In fact, it has been found that cows fed on cardboard boxes give particularly creamy milk. Unfortunately, the human stomach is very different from a cow's, so it seems unlikely that we shall ever be able to read the newspapers at breakfast one day and eat it for breakfast the next, but stranger things are possible and the others are done.

Scientists and technologists in many countries are busy finding new ways of using our old rubbish. It now seems that there is some hope that we shall not run out of raw materials or ruin our areas and villages with rubbish dumps.

The giant panda bear is a favourite of children and animal-lovers throughout the world. Though so well known and loved, the panda is slowly dying out. At present, there are only about 1230 wild pandas left in the world. They all live in China, in the forests of two provinces only. Pandas used to be common in other areas. However, as the human population increased and the forests shrank, panda territory gradually disappeared. And so did the pandas. Now, the Chinese government has created a number of 'panda reserves' to protect the pandas and limit the human settlement and tree cutting.

Chinese scientists recently had a chance to study a wild female panda bear with a newborn baby. She was a very loving mother. For 25 days, she never left her baby, not even to find something to eat! She would not let any other panda bears come near. She licked the baby constantly to keep it clean. Any smell might attract natural enemies that would try to eat the little panda. When the baby panda cried, the mother held her baby in her front paws, rocked it back and forth and gave it little comforting pats. The mother continued to care for the young bear for over two years. By that time, the panda no longer needed its mother for food. However, it stayed with her and learned about the ways of the forest. Then, after two and a half years, the mother chased the young bear away. It was time for young panda to be independent. Actually, the giant panda is considered China's national treasure.

Winter is cold in some places. Many plants do not grow during winter. Some plants die. Snow and ice may cover the ground. It can be hard for animals to find food during winter. Animals get through this time in many ways.

Birds and butterflies can fly. Many of them do not stick around for the winter. They leave. They go to a place with nice weather. Then they come home in the spring. We call this migration. Migrating is a good way to avoid the cold.

Another good way to avoid the cold is to sleep through it. Many animals hide during the winter. Their bodies slow down. They save their energy. They do not eat. They live off of their fat. They do this until food returns. We call this hibernation. Snakes, frogs, and bears hibernate.

Some animals store food in their homes. They do not sleep all winter, but they do much less. They live on what they saved in the summer and fall. This is what squirrels, beavers, and raccoons do. Skunks do this too.

Other animals tough it out. They do not leave. They do not hide. They must survive. Sometimes nature helps them out. Some animals grow thicker coats in the winter. Other animals change color. The arctic fox is brown in the summer. His coat turns white in the winter.
